The Project and Digital India Initiative

The project “Bharat through my script” is an initiative started by MILE Lab, IISc in late 2014. The vision is to facilitate every Indian to go beyond the script barrier and read online documents in any Indian script through an already known familiar script. This is in line with the Digital India Initiative of the Prime Minister of our country, which aims to empower and enable every citizen through creative digital technologies.

Motivation

As Indians, most of us speak and/or understand at least one or more languages in addition to our most familiar language, but may not be able to read material in those scripts. So, if someone else reads a document in that language, we will be able to understand. Now, with MILE transliterator as a browser plugin, we can read it ourselves, in our own script. So, the ultimate motivation behind this project is that one can access documents in all the languages one knows, without having to spend time and effort in knowing the dominant script of that language. It is also our wish and prayer that this will contribute towards greater unity and understanding between the different communities in India.

Free download

This is planned to be uploaded as a free download on google chrome app store, after due testing.

Dedication

MILE laboratory dedicates this project and its outcome to every citizen of Bharat.
